What is AAC?

Augmentative and Alternative Communication

AAC, also called Augmentative and Alternative Communication, is an area of clinical practice that aims to promote a mode of communication that can suit the needs of every individual.

AAC is a flexible communicative system that helps people with communication disorders by supplementing written language with visual supports. AAC can therefore be used to enable people with speech impairments to communicate and relate to other people in an efficient way.

AAC allows individuals to build a mode of communication that helps them to interact, thereby overcoming, and in fact breaking, any kind of language barrier.

What is an art exhibition?

An art exhibition is an event or a place where you can view works of art. Works of art can be paintings, sculptures, photographs, videos and other things made by artists.

In the exhibition you can look, listen and learn new things.

The exhibition can be in a museum,

in a gallery, in another place.

An 	art 	exhibition 	is 	an 	opportunity 	to have 	a 	good time 	together 	and 	discover 	beautiful things 	.
